Poll Expected In September

British Columbia's politicians have next week marked in red-because most of them think it will be the week when Premier Bennett announces his intention to go to the country for a general election.

His Social Credit party is planning big celebrations to mark eight years in control of provincial affairs. And in his hometown of Kelowna on Wednesday the premier will be formally nominated by his South Okanagan constituency organization to be their candidate again.

Mr. Bennett returned to Vancouver Friday from the dominion-provincial conference at Ottawa which was followed by the national meeting of the Social Credit party. In Vancouver Monday he will attend a big Socred birthday party where a six-tiered cake will be cut,

Kelowna Meeting Likely Setting

General prediction is Mr. Bennett will announce his ction intentions at the Kelowna nomination meeting election intent Wednesday.

But there is some doubt he will announce the actual date at that time.

It is not customary to make public the date until the actual proclamation dissolving the existing legislature has been signed by the lieutenant-governor.

A minimum of 38 days is required by law between this action and election day. If the proclamation were made next week, the election could be as early as Sept. 10, which would leave only a brief week of campaigning following the summer holiday season when few politicians like to be on the hustings.

Thus most political observers believe that while the premier may end his private little joke about election prospects next week, the actual date may not be announced until the middle of August, with the polling fixed around

Early Nominations Strong Hint

A considerable number of Social Credit nomination meetings have already been held, including those for several cabinet ministers. To the politically-wise this is a sure tip of the impending election since the Socred constitution automatically voids a nomination if an election is not held within six months.

Observers also noted that in Ottawa this week Mr. Bennett said he was "looking ahead" to an election and even would welcome a healthy opposition. They also noted that his brief to the Dominion provincial conference was surprisingly moderate and presented in a spirit of co-operation rather than huge demands as made by some of the other provinces. At the Social Credit conference his remarks were interpreted as a definite move away from any so-called "funny-money" ideas of Social Credit, and included some of the present financial system as long as some of the "rules could be changed" to make it work

All these signs seem to be pointing the way to the election, the politicians think.

Like Pavlov's Dogs

Now Dr. William Sargant, a distinguished English physician of psychological medicine, suggests that Mr. Khrushchev has applied the Pavlovian method to human beings. By mixing its signals from day to day, Russian propaganda is condi-tioning, reconditioning and bewildering the Western mind. It is trying, with substantial success, to reduce the free nations to nervous wrecks, to render them as neurotic and help less as Pavlov's dogs.

This thesis, as explained by Dr. Sargant in The New York Times Magazine, is interesting scientifi-cally but, valid or not in pure science, it is a sound warning in practical affairs. For clearly, like Pavlov in his laboratory, the Gov-ernment in the Kremlin has systematically baffled the democracies.

For example, says Dr. Sargant, Russia launched its first sputnik amid world excitement and an-nounced solemnly that it had no military significance. Yet a few days later the world was informed that this achievement gave Russia the power to destroy most parts of America at will.

"Then," says Dr. Sargant, "we were again reassured that this experiment and the research leading up to it were part of a peace-loving Russia's contribution to the International Geophysical Year; but later we were again reminded that it also meant a total revolution in all modern ideas of global warfare."

Following this long bombardment of conflicting signals, the Vestern public showed much the same sort of confusion, anxiety and neurotic sickness as Pavlov's dogs.

His techniques were used even more brilliantly at the Summit with

THE GREAT RUSSIAN SCIEN- a series of positive and negative signals

"At first," as Dr. Sargant recalls, "we were told that the spy plane incident imperiled all international relations; then we were reassured that it should not affect, the Summit meeting; then we were warned that foreign air bases sending spy flights over Russia would be attacked, but again we were quickly reassured about the imminent Summit confer-ence. Then we were told almost imafterward that atom bombs might soon be raining down on America if she persisted in her

Thus the Western leaders arrived at the Summit in a state of world-wide anxiety and tension.

Here again continuously alternating Here again continuously alternating signals were used with useful effect moral indignation in Paris, more reassurances in Berlin, genial gestures in Moscow and lately more threats in Cuba. The alternating electrical current of Russian propa ganda, positive and negative, continues to flow into the human as into the canine mind, and with the same general results.

No one outside Russia knows what Mr. Khrushchev is doing, if he knows himself amid his own Pavtensions, constantly applied by his colleagues and his frighten-ing friends in Peking. But it is easy to see what the West has been do-ing. It has been reacting, like those unfortunate experimental dogs, to every Russian signal, almost to the point of paralyzing its own action. "Terrible propaganda defeats can and will take place," says Dr. Sargant, "if we continue to allow ourselves to sort out too many of those signals which are intended from the first to make nonsense. . . .

Socreds Won't Debate

TWICE IN RECENT WEEKS SOcial Credit members of the leg-islature have turned down challenges from political opponents for a free and open debate on the Socred record. Mr. Bonner rudely brushed aside the request of Conservative leader Deane Finlayson. Now the Victoria members have spurned Mr. George Gregory's offer, advising him to "fill his own hall."

In certain cases, where an obscure aspirant may challenge an established politician, the public may conclude that he is acting from ulterior motives and does, indeed, wish to publicize himself at the expense of "the old pro." This could

It is a pity that Socred J. Donald Smith has turned him aside with a cheap quip. The public loves a good political debate. It is a useful thing for the community.

In this instance, the public may be forgiven for concluding that the local Socreds are afraid of Mr. Gregory, a smart young lawyer who has made mincemeat of the opposition on many occasions. Else why shouldn't the Socreds debate their record? Is it really indefensible?

New Task for Scientists

THE MASSACHUSETTS INSTItute of Technology is not old as universities go. Laval, in Quebec City, far antedates it in origin.

But MIT has a tradition of research, advanced work in science and the application of science to industrial problems perhaps unique on the continent.

On the eve of its second century the famous higher educational centre on the Charles River has had occasion to analyse its position today and its goals for tomorrow.

Dr. Julius A. Stratton, its president, says that few realize the terrific impact science and tech-nology are having everywhere. "We recognize this in the military terms of national survival, but it is even more important in peacetime industrial and social terms. The United States needs to provide outstanding world leadership in all phases of science and technology. It is preeminently MIT's role to provide leadership in meeting the professional aspects of this challenge."

Such leadership, however, is not enough, he says. MIT can produce the scientists and engineers capable of handling scientific and engineering problems-is doing this ip many fields under generous gov-ernment sponsorship. But the scientists and the engineers need more sional excellence. They need education to fit them for the servatives cross.

Back in the lean and hungry days Back in the lean and hungry days

The university hopes to carry forward the development of the scientist as a whole man, not merely a one-field expert, by maintaining and intensifying emphasis on its students as students—not solely as cogs in a highly effective industrial or scientific machine. That means continued interest in the humanities as well as basic science

The direction of MIT's drive is vital, since engineers and scientists, becoming increasingly important in the affairs of the country and the world, must parallel their specialized training with a fuller under-standing of man as man.

They must retain communica-tion with the world outside their specialties. And since they are men of ability, they have a better chance of equipping themselves for this task than has the average person, perhaps not so intellectually enof establishing communication with the specialists.

Just Dial for Coffee

THE AMERICAN PUBLICATION for businessmen. The Nation's Business, thus forecasts, with rather terrifying confidence, the future methods of scientific merchandising:

"A housewife sees an ad for a percolator in a national magazine. She phones the manufacturer or outlet and asks to have a five-minute demonstration put on the TV set. The film is dialed in by telephone and, after the housewife decides, she dials back and orders. The outlet teletypes the factory where the percolator is made to order. This gives the customer a styling option and minimizes inventory costs. When ready, the percolator is air-ex-pressed to the customer and charged on a universal credit card.'

This sounds fine and may be good for business. But it may be hard on husbands who, in the still more affluent society of the future, must still redeem that universal credit card. And in the interests of pay lipservice to democracy; he spends progress, we suppose, he must also take his morning beverage from the new-fangled percolator even if he prefers the old-fashioned enamel television, at the corner store.

The Speech That Doesn't Get Spoken

A CANADIAN who regularly reads the Hansard of his Parliament is apt, at the end of a long evening, to fall into sleep or vague reveries, imagining the kind of ideal speech which he is un-likely ever to hear. Each citizen is entitled to his private version and mine (pouring from the lips of some nameless backbencher in noble cadence) runs as follows

"Mr. Speaker, I trust that I shall not breach the rules trust that I shall not breach the ruses or affront the delicate sensibilities of this House if I venture, by way of change, to utter a few words of truth change, to utter a few words and cite certain obvious facts.

It is difficult to make people even slightly confused if they avoid becoming interested in and co-operating with the propaganda technique designed to bring about their undoing."

Up to now, however, Mr. Khrushchev has received perfect co-operation from the West.

"By these and other methods we have succeeded thus far in creating a national economy distorted, dropsical, lopsided, whipsawed and overpriced, and instead of examining basic causes the best solu-tion we can think of is to increase the promises and raise the ante.

AGAIN, we perpetually boast of our A GAIN, we perpetually boast of our rising standard of living but I hope I shall not be thought rude and unparliamentary if I note that, in cold statistics our standard of living on average has recently declined. It may be, indeed, that our competi-tors in Britain, Germany, Japan, Russia and other places are as smart as we are. It may even be that one of these days we shall have to live within our own means, by our own hard work, though that is, I confess, a subversive and un Canadian notion which doubtless will cause my defeat at the next election.

In the end, it was Mr. Frost who brought about the separation; his demands at this week's federalprovincial conference came as a distinct shock to Mr. Diefenbaker and his govern-ment, and Mr. Diefen-

In other words, scientists and engineers have to be wizards in their specialized fields, but their contribution will be inadequate unless they assume a larger social shove.

Just before the convention, Mr. Frost let it be known publicly that he felt "Johnny is a good boy," the Ontario delegation fell in line, and Mr. Diefenhaker was on his way.

In the 1957 campaign, Mr. Frost -$1,600,000,000 a year, enough to run the demands would take $2,000,000,000 showed just how well-disposed he was the department of national defence, from toward his fellow lawyer. He threw the federal treasury to the provinces the full weight of his organization behind the federal party, something he had refused to do for George Drew. The Liberals say the Frost organization put well over $1,000,000 into that campaign, and more agian in 1958. To say the least, Mr. Frost went all the way.

Out west, and in the Maritimes, fears were expressed that the Toronto-Ottawa axis would result in a government whose emphasis and policies were directed migratification. ted primarily at the betterment of Ontario. Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Frost went fisking together at the PM's sum-Ontario. mer lodge at Harrnington Lake, in the Gatineau hills.

Not many months ago Mr. Frost turned very chilly toward Ottawa. He started talking in terms of wanting $100. 000,000 more a year under the tax-rental agreement, and later amended this to "hundreds of millions" more.

With this in mind, it is not fair to Mr. Frost to say he didn't warn the federal government in advance of this But the magnitude of his demands.

took Ottawa's breath away Mr. Frost's friendship had cooled to the extent that he didn't send Ottawa a copy of his brief in advance, a step considered most unnatural as between a Conservative prime minister and the Conservative premier of Ontario. Ottawa did get some hint of what was in Mr. Frost's submission by an under-ground route on the day before the conferences started.

People who know said the Prime Minister and Mr. Fleming were livid with rage. Publicly they went as far as they could properly go without mak-ing a direct attack on Mr. Frost. The Prime Minister referred to the "fabulous demands" of the provinces, and his eyes were on Mr. Frost as he said it.

Mr. Fleming decided on a subtle form of counter-attack. He toted up Mr Frost's demands for a 50-50 split of personal and corporate income taxes and succession duties, added an increased equalization and stabilization factor, threw in a few of the varied demands of the other provinces, and said interesting conference.

Whatever the reason, it made for an interesting conference.

With one sentence, Mr. Fleming made the Ontario premier appear a grasping, greedy political leader, mak-ing reckless and irresponsible demanda on the national treasury.

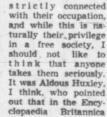

None of this is particularly indicative of a co-operation arrangement between Ottawa and Ontario. On the contrary, it is political warfare. Mr. Frost is obviously out to divorce himself from the federal Conservatives.

There are many theories going the rounds. Some say Mr. Frost is fed up with waiting for Ottawa to offer Ontario the money it needs to cope with a fast-growing population, and, in fact Ontario is going heavily into debt. Ontario is going heavily into debt.

Most politicians believe it is simply Most politicians believe it is simply a case of Leslie Frost, acting on the advice of Toronto businessmen who are uneasy over the fiscal policies of the Diefenbaker government, cutting Mr. Diefenbaker adrift. Others say Mr. Frost is merely setting up Ontario voters for a stiff sales tax.

I have never been in China, but I imagine that what Monty saw was a people mobilized to tackle some immense problems under leaders who are, to put it mildly, resolute. He would be impressed by the morale and the will-to-win and the readiness to sacrifice everything to the end-in view. As a general he would not be likely to boggle at the casualties en-tailed by such an operation.

There is another side of Monty that would react favorably to some aspects of New China, and that is his puritanical outlook. The short shrift that is given to human failings by Mao and his followers would appeal to the chaste and sober Montgomery; and there is no need, after all, to be a fanatical teetotaller in order to admire a nation which puts self-indulgence after the na-

An old man I knew remembers Monty as a keen G-2 on the staff of the irascible Astley Cubitt in the years following World War I. During an exercise on Salisbury Plain while Cubitt was absent at Corps Headquarters Monty concealed Divisional Headquarters so skilfully that Cubitt could not find it for two hours. A WRITER'S DIARY BOOKS

By ROBERTSON DAVIES

Last week I saw Shakespeare's "King John" performed at the Stratford (Ontario) Shakespearean Festival and it moved me to wonder what sort of man John really was. Since then I have been doing some reading about John, and he proves to be an interesting and by no means unattractive character.

In popular belief, John was a "bad" king. Con-temporary accounts of him stress his wickedness, but we must bear in mind that the chroniclers of John's day were all churchmen; John was always in trouble with the Church, and therefore he received a bad press from the Church.

John was the most horrifying thing the 12th century could conceive of—he was an unbeliever.

He went through the re-ligious ceremonles which were hungry; when he advanced to

The other group would include all the evergreen and deciduous (leaf-losing) shrubs, trees, comifers and vines.

Theoretically this is sound logic. In the cold spell of November, 1955, it was the neglected gardens, those subjected to drought and lack of food the previous summer that were least damaged. The fluscious well fed and carefully tended gardens suffered extensively because of the soft growth on the plants.

Jim Piggott, owner of the city's Western Hockey League franchise, has said he doesn't expect there will be pro hockey in Victoria next winter be-cause of differences in rental negotiations for Memorial Arena.

Piggott, who had earlier been speaking by telephone with arena commission chair-man Frank Mulliner, said at Saskatoon Friday night that he is finished dickering with the commission and ready to forget about running a Vic-toria entry in the WHL race.

Piggott's proposal was that and the arena would handle administration for the team and provide the arena, starting to charge rent only after the owner had met operating expenses. "It looks to me as if there will be no professional hockey in Victoria this season," Piggott said. "The commission apparently doesn't want to accept my proposition. As far as I am concerned, my terms are the only ones under which I will operate.

DOUG PEDEN, Sports Editor

NEW YORK-The baseball career of Jimmy Piersall, who has a history of mental sickness, is in jeopardy unle he controls himself on the field.

"He's eliminating himself," said Frank Lane, the general manager of the Cleveland Indians. "Jimmy apologizes for what he does and then does it all over again."

It is the angry theory of some of the Indians that Piersall's continuous demonstrations have reduced the team's ability. He has made them so jittery they claim they are incapable of playing up to their skills. They won five out of six games during the week of rest ordered for Piersall by the club physician. Then they dropped 12 out of 17 after he returned. They also believe he has turned the umpires of the league against them.

They had requested an appointment with Joe Gordon, their manager, to protest Piersail's behavior. But the meeting was called off after Harvey Kuenn, the club's player representative, had a talk with Piersall.

"It's up to Gordon," Lane said. "I can't tell him to manage 24 guys and I'll manage Piersall. If Joe decides we'll win more games without Piersall, that's the way it has to be."

The spectacular outfielder is popular with Cleveland buffs and they turn out to see him play. Lane, who was interviewed in his suite at the Hotel Roosevelt, seemed sur-

"If I were league president," Lane said, "I'd be after Jimmy for the way he showed up the umpires. But I admire Cronin for what he's trying to do. He's trying to salvage Jimmy as the head of a family of seven children.

Already this season Piersall has been fined $650.

It's just about time to lift that old scattergun out of the rack and start doing a bit of cleaning and polishing, 'cause in just five more weeks we're going to be able to start busting away at grouse and band-tailed pigeons.

It's also time to start getting the dog and your own legs in condition and to think about a few preseason sessions of blasting clay pigeons.

Starting the shooting season with a dog that has ac-quired extra pounds and tender feet from a summer of loaf-ing on the lawn is a form of cruelty. And if he hasn't been worked since last season, the poor critter can't be blamed if he starts flushing birds 100 yards ahead of the gun, which is a situation calculated to frazzle any gunner's nerves on a hot opening-day afternoon.

Time and money spent on banging away at clay targets can pay big dividends in birds in the bag when the shooting is for keeps. Two fellows with a hand trap can get in some useful practice in an hour. Even better trigger-finger exeravailable at the Victoria Fish and Game Protective in operation on Wednesday evenings for the rest of the

As for the hunting, the band-tails and blue and ruffed (willow) grouse come into season on Sept. 3, and indications are that grouse will be a bit more plentiful than last year, except, perhaps, in the northern part of Vancouver Island.

Last September the blues started their migration into higher timber earlier than usual and shooting was slower than expected. The smaller-than-predicted kill plus a third straight mild winter resulted in an increased number of birds on the nesting grounds this spring.

Checks Show Good Hatching Results

Although June was a cool month, early-summer field checks by game biologists Don Robinson and John Bandy showed excellent hatching results and good-sized broods. An exception was the northern section of the Island, where rain made things tough for the young birds, and the grouse count may be down in the Campbell River area.

Blue grouse remain in season until Nov-6 and the willows will be legal targets until Dec. 11. Daily bag limit of grouse is eight, of which six may be willows. Daily limit on pigeons, which will probably be long gone south before they go back on the protected list Oct. 16, is 10 per hunter.

Robinson, incidentally, ended a nine-year term as gional game biologist at Nanaimo at the beginning of this month. Don was promoted to assistant to Dr. James Hatter, B.C.'s chief game-management biologist, and is now working out of Vancouver.

Robinson has been succeeded at Nanaimo by Bandy and the pair will be working together in a couple of weeks on the Island's final preseason check, which should produce a more accurate picture of the grouse situation.

Deer also benefitted from another mild winter and Robinson estimates the mowich population is up about 10 per cent from a year ago. Not much change has been noticed in southern areas, but in Mid-Island sections where logging operations have been more extensive deer have shown a healthy increase.

Weather is always a major factor in deer hunting and Don believes that if riflemen get some good breaks from the weather, the Vancouver Island deer kill could top the present record of just over 17,000 animals in one seaso

D. M. Morrison, in an interim report, said operating revenue was $9,916,000, up from $7,080.000, and gross income was $10,478,000, up from $7,182,000.	VANCOUVER (CP)—An official of British Columbia Packers Ltd. said Thursday the province's 1960 salmon pack could be 200.000 cases—the lowest in 17 years—"and I'm being optimistic." J. M. Buchanan, president and board chairman, said the pack fell below 200,000 cases in 1903, 1921 and 1943, and "it looks like one of those years." He said the sockeye runs fook disappointing although pinks, cohos and chums could be about normal. He said the company's net income for the year ended March 31 was $929,972, down 50.4 per cent from the previous year. However, sales revenue was $56,325,305, down only 11 per cent from $63,317,378 and second highest in the company's history. Industrial Zone Study Asked By Chatterton

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Reeve George Chatterton of Saanich will seek HAZARD HIGH council's approval for a Capital Region Planning Board urban renewal study of the municipality's light industrial zone west of Douglas.

trial zone west of Douglas.

Purpose of the study, the reeve said today, would be to apply for federal provincial grants to redevelop and plan the industrial zone.

The study would involve about 43½ acres of land bounded by Douglas, Tolmie, Whittier, Culduthel and Regina.

Within the next few years, the reeve said, there will be a big demand for property for warehouse development as the result of the new ferry link between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen.

The Tryon Gallery exhibition was the result—his first show in England.

During his visit, Mr. Lansdowne sketched "almost every bird they have" in their natural habitats. The working sketches will be supplemented by mounted subjects being sent to his home which will be used for creation of the astonishingly detailed works he is noted for.

"I made enough sketches to keep me busy until May when I return to London for the show," he said in an interview. In the meantime, a nine-month tour of western provinces will start in September for a travelling exhibition of a number of his paintings "The English birds are quite different from ours—much different species and it was quite stimulating to sketch them," he said. "But I certainly haven't run out of North American subjects yet."

On his way to England in May, Mr.

Lansdowne was mobbed in Toronto by autograph hunters at a special reception for him and later was greeted enthusiastically in New York.

Tiny Daughters Will Love
Handbags That Play Tunes

By PENNY SAVER

Now your little daughter can be like the girl in the nursery rhyme and have "music wherever she goes," that is, if she has one of the new handbags in one downtown store. Red plastic bags are Canadian made and are the first Ive seen that have their own little music box built in. Wind it, and an attractive lilting nursery rhyme will tinkle merrily. Pouch musical bags have shoulder straps for easy carrying and zippered tops. Price of melody makers is $2.95.

Career girls and mothers planning a holiday trip will want to see the compact little brushes that come in a flat, handbag size, black plastic box.

To use, you simply slip off the cover, slide it in the groove in the most of the new one to your list.

Take a deep breath, close your eyes and fall into the water.

To keeping your feet on the edge for just as long as possible. This last is most important because it will keep you from hitting the water flat. Kick your feet and come to the sur face of the water.

Later on, after you have leave the roll of the word in the water and lility was held. A three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bouquet of red roses and fluy surrounding a single lily.

Following the ceremony, a reception for immediate friends and fall into the water.

Later on after you have leave the bride wore a blue ensemble and corsage of variegated carnations.

On return the groom left for Egypt where he has a posting with the Royal Canadian Air Force.

For a salad dressing that's different try this: Beat one half cup honey and one half one water.

Having always connected Dresden china with fairly high price tags I was surprised to find that there are exquisite little figures that can be bought for as low as $8.35. Standing between the content of the cover, slide it in the groove new one to your list.

If you would like to have my leaflet. "Learn to Swim," which gives diving instructions, too, send a stamped, self-tions, too, send a stamped, self-tion price tags I was surprised to find that the are expussed integring that can be bought for as low as $3.35. Standing between two and three inches high, are dainty little old world ladies, some sitting in gold-edged chairs, others dancing, all with forget-me-nots or roses on their lacy skirts.

Court ladies, seated on graceful old-fashioned chairs, are

These sell at $4.50. Figurines would appeal to any woman. As for teen-age daughters, they'd love them!

Another moderately priced line in English bone china has a bluebird lighting on a realistic log, covered with delicately colored flowers. Flowers vary with every individual piece but included in the selection are roses, pansies and carnations.

Table centres, measuring about six inches in length, compare favorably with others I've seen selling at much higher prices. Price tag on these says $3.50.

STAY ON 'LOW ROAD' SAYS OUTGOING LEADER

Credit leader, served notice on the party's national convention Friday night that if the newly-elected executive departs to far from orthodox Social Credit_"I'm here to yank them back as long as I'm national leader

At the convention's concluding session Mr. Low pledged the new executive his "wholehearted support."

But he added to the pledge the words "as long as they stay on the road to Social Credit."

Mr. Low, who told the convention earlier that he will lay down the leadership at a convention this fall or winter, appeared to be referring to the fact that some of the ideas and expressions long associated with the movement were left out of a new statement of policy.

In some measure, Mr. Low subscribed to the new look in an early convention address during which he suggested that the party move with the time and not try to sell itself on the basis of policies framed in the thirties but

Poll Expected In September

British Columbia's politicians have next week marked in red-because most of them think it will be the week when Premier Bennett announces his intention to go to the country for a general election.

His Social Credit party is planning big celebrations to mark eight years in control of provincial affairs. And in his hometown of Kelowna on Wednesday the premier will be formally nominated by his South Okanagan constituency organization to be their candidate again.

Mr. Bennett is returning to B.C. this weeken from the dominion provincial conference at Ottawa which was the dominion-provincial conference at Ottawa which was followed by the national meeting of the Social Credit party. In Vancouver Monday he will attend a big Socred birthday party where a six-tiered cake will be cut,

Kelowna Meeting Likely Setting

General prediction is Mr. Bennett will announce his election intentions at the Kelowna nomination meeting Wednesday.

But there is some doubt he will announce the actual date at that time.

It is not customary to make public the date until the actual proclamation dissolving the existing legislature has been signed by the lleutenant-governor,

A minimum of 38 days is required by law between this action and election day. If the proclamation were made next week, the election could be as early as Sept. 10, which would leave only a brief week of campaigning following the summer holiday season when few politicians like to be on the buttings. like to be on the hustings.

Thus most political observers believe that while the premier may end his private little joke about election prospects next week, the actual date may not be announced until the middle of August, with the polling fixed around

Early Nominations Strong Hint

A considerable number of Social Credit nomination meetings have already been held, including those for several cabinet ministers. To the politically-wise this is a sure tip of the impending election since the Socred constitution automatically voids a nomination if an election is not held within six months.

Observers also noted that in Ottawa this week Mr. Bennett said he was "looking ahead" to an election and even would welcome a healthy opposition.

They also noted that his brief to the Dominion-provincial conference was surprisingly moderate and presented in a spirit of co-operation rather than huge by some of the other provinces. At the Social Credit conference his remarks were interpreted as a definite move away from any so-called "funny money" ideas of Social Credit, and included endorsement of the present financial system as long as some of the "rules could be changed" to make it work better for the people.

All these signs seem to be pointing the way to the election, the politicians think

SOCREDS' ANNIVERSARY

B.C. Vote Call Seen Next Week

British Columbia's politicians have next week marked in red-because most of them think it will be the week when Premier Bennett announces his intention to go to the country for a general election.

His Social Credit party is planning big celebrations. to mark eight years in control of provincial affairs. And in his hometown of Kelowna on Wednesday the premier will be formally nominated by his South Okanagan constituency organization to be their candidate again.

Mr. Bennett returned to Vancouver Friday from the dominion-provincial conference at Ottawa which was followed by the national meeting of the Social Credit party.

In Vancouver Monday he will attend a big Socred birthday party where a six-tiered cake will be cut,

Kelowna Meeting Likely Setting

General prediction is Mr. Bennett will announce his election intentions at the Kelowna nomination meeting But there is some doubt he will announce the actual date at that time.

It is not customary to make public the date until the actual proclamation dissolving the existing legislature has been signed by the lieutenant-governor.

A minimum of 38 days is required by law between this action and election day. If the proclamation were made next week, the election could be as early as Sept. 10, which would leave only a brief week of campaigning following the summer holiday see on when tew politicians like to be on the hustings,

Thus most political observers believe that while the premier may end his private little joke about election ospects next week, the actual date may not be an until the middle of August, with the polling fixed around

Early Nominations Strong Hint

A considerable number of Social Credit nomination meetings have already been held, including those for several cabinet ministers. To the politically wise this is a sure tip of the impending election since the Socred constitution automatically voids a nomination if an election is not held within six months.

Observers also noted that in Ottawa this week Mr. Bennett said he was "looking ahead" to an election and even would welcome a healthy opposition.

They also noted that his brief to the Dominion-provincial conference was surprisingly moderate and presented in a spirit of co-operation rather than huge demands as made by some of the other provinces.

At the Social Credit conference his remarks were interpreted as a definite move away from any so-called "funny-money" ideas of Social Credit, and included "funny-money" ideas of Social Credit, and included endorsement of the present financial system as long as some of the "rules could be changed" to make it work for the people.

All these signs seem to be pointing the way to the election, the politicians think

'No Hope' Lake Resort

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) -The last of 68 firefighters caught behind fire lines near the picturesque fishing resort of Lac Le Juene were rescued today by an RCAF helicopter. Norman McCrae, Kamloops ssistant forester, said 25 men left overnight on the south shores of Mildred Lake, 30 south of here, were safely evacuated.

The fierce 5,000-acre fire that exploded over guards late Friday, trapping the men, burned to within 200 yards of the small lake.

Guests at a resort on the north shore of the lake, now one mile from the edge of the fierce inforno, were evacuated Friday, Included was the fam-ily of Justice Minister Fulton.

Early reports said that a ski tow and cabin were de-stroyed on 'the south shore but it was later reported the fire was checked before it reached them.
